Complaint – shortness of breath. Pain in side and diarrhoea.

Family history good. Surroundings fair. Temperate habits.

Always well until last Nov. when he had "La Grippe". He has a sharp pain on left side. This is increased on exertion or when leaning on right side. It is of a radiating character and passes to the abdomen and around down the left thigh. Pain is increased on full inspiration. Dyspnoea and palpitation on exertion. Occasionally headaches. Is very languid and easily fatigued. Lost much flesh and strength. Appetite good. Bowels regular. Phys Exam. The expansive movements on left side of chest is restricted and especially at lower part of the chest. Vocal fremitus is diminished. The percussion note on right side of chest is normal. But percussion over left chest elicits slight dullness at apex in front. And masked dullness from 5th rib down to the 7th rib. Behind find slight dullness near 3rd rib left side, with flatness from 5th rib to the 7th rib. The respiratory murmur is interrupted and quite feeble over lower lobe. There are no sibilant or moist rales heard in any portion of chest. But there is a rough friction murmur heard near 2nd rib in front. Also a still greater friction sound heard in lower portion of left chest in front and behind This sound is heard both on inspiration and expiration and does not vary if asked to cough. — There is no cough – no expectoration. no hectic condition, no bronchial breathing – no night sweats.

Otto Rall.

190 Broome St.

U.S. 21. S. Clerk. Sick 2 years.

Father died of Phthisis; rest of family history good. Mother and brother living also grandfather on mother's side. About 2 years ago contracted a 'cold', had cough with expectoration. Haemoptysis commenced in the latter part of June, 5 mos. after appearance of the cough; had one on June 27, 3 on the 28th and one on 29th. Has not had a hemorrhage since, but has coughed bloody sputum on two occasions. Previous to two years ago, had always been in good health. no venereal or specific trouble. Good habits, never addicted to the use of tobacco or alcohol. Entered P.G. Hospital, Dec. 21. '90 and discharged Mch. 7. '91. Had 16 injections of Koch's Lymph of 1 – 11 milligrams each up to Mch. when on account of temperature was refused and put on creosote. Gained some flesh and strength while under treatment of the injections, but has lost it again.

Complains now of cough, very severe, day and night, causing nausea and vomiting. Expectoration yellowish, frothy and large in amount. It is readily raised. Sometimes bloody. Chest pains, front, sharp and stabbing in character. Dyspnoea on slightest exertion. no palpitation. No night sweats since beginning of treatment. Loss of flesh and strength. Has Chills every day from 11 a.m. – 4 p.m. followed by fever until 9 p.m. when it gradually subsides. No appetite. Nausea before and after eating. Bowels move twice daily.

Physical exam: Chest slightly emaciated especially at apices. expansion less at right apex. both bases contracted. Respiration 34. Apex beat diffused. Pulsation in both supra clavicular fossae. Skin pale. Superficial reflexes exaggerated. Myoidema marked on both sides. Right apex, dullness on percussion to lower border of 2d rib.. vesiculo. tympanitic resonance over 3d rib, below, slight dullness down to liver area. Left apex, same as at right except signs at 3d rib. In left axilla, normal, Right axilla dullness from 3d rib to base. Behind, flatness from angle of scapula down on right side. Auscultation, Right apex, prolonged high pitched respiration, markedly roughened: over 3d rib, amphoric respiration and from that point down, roughened respiration, increased vocal resonance to lower border of 2d rib: pectoriloquy at 3d rib. Slightly increased vocal resonance below this area. At 3d rib, a large number crepitant rales on deep inspiration. Left side, over left apex, prolonged high pitched inspiration, roughened respiration with prolongation of expiration. Large number of crepitant rales on ordinary respiration. vocal resonance increased. Left apilla, same signs as in front. Right axilla, increased vocal resonance, roughened respiration. Behind, left supra & spinous fossa, loud creaky rales & marked increased vocal resonance. Roughened respiration over back on right side, A few scattered crepitant and large mucous rales over all of chest. Pulse 110. 1st sound, shortned and a little high pitched. pulmonic 2d sound markedly exaggerated.

Dec. 26 '90. Temperature 101. Patient injected with one milligram of Koch's lymph by Dr. Linsley, at 9.35 a.m.

Dec. 27. Left side, decided increase in number of crepitant rales. increased vocal resonance. Right side, fewer large mucous rales, about same number crepitant rales.

Jany. 2 '91 The changes in the patient may be summarized as follows: Evidence of increased area of lung involved, but with an increased elimination of discharge from the larger tubes. The excavation has smoother walls and lessened contents. Patients general condition markedly improved.

Jany. 9 Area of consolidation on left side fully as great as before, but great diminution in number of crepitant rales on right side, signs unchanged, but mucous rales fewer in numbers.

Jany 23. Area of disease not increased, less inflammation. Area of inflamed lung contracting, presumably due to retraction of diseased lung.

Feby 27 No mucous rales; no increase in area of disease. In left axilla from 5th rib down dullness on percussion distant respiration and many pleuritic rales due to exudative pleuritis.

Treatment. Syr. calcii hypophosphit. Ungt. plumbi iodide.
